A Tkalciceva Street

Ul. Ivana Tkalčića, 10000, Zagreb, Croatia See map ›

Phone: 098 914 5696

Sit in one of the many cafes or restaurants on Tkalciceva Street and experience the spirit of old Zagreb. The street developed from the stream valley between the capital city's two oldest settlements, Gradec and the Capitol. The center of Zagreb's earliest industry, the street hosted manufacturers of cloth, soap, paper, liqueurs, and leather during the 18th and 19th centuries. Browse the galleries and boutiques, which continue the tradition of old craftspeople and merchants. Try to tell time with the old sundial and see the statue of Marija Juric Zagorka, the first Croatian female journalist.

B St. Mark's Church

Trg Sv. Marka 5, 10000, Zagreb, Croatia See map ›

Phone: +385 1 4851 611

Take in historic architecture and art at St. Mark's Church. Notice the roof tiles, which depict a white castle on a red background--the coats of arms of the city of Zagreb. Watch for the Romanesque window and Gothic doorway that remain from the original structure. At the southern portal, admire the Gothic sculptures, which represent the twelve apostles, Joseph and Mary with baby Jesus, and St. Mark with the lion. On the northwest wall of the church, you can see the oldest coat of arms of Zagreb from 1499. In the church interior, keep an eye out for two statues by Ivan Mestrovic, considered by many to be the most famous Croatian sculptor of the 20th century.

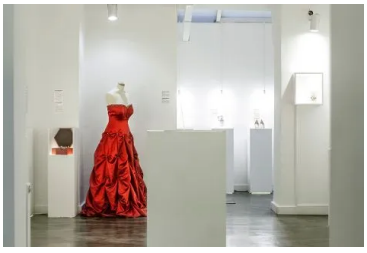
G Museum of Broken Relationships

Ćirilometodska ul. 2, 10000, Zagreb, Croatia See map ›

Phone: +385 1 4851 021

Monday open hours: 10am - 9pm



At Museum of Broken Relationships, reflect on the fragility of human relationships, and consider the political, social, and cultural circumstances surrounding the love stories presented. After the end of their four-year relationship, Olinka Vistica and Drazen Grubisic started the collection with their leftover personal items. See how other people embraced the idea of exhibiting their past love as a sort of mourning. The facility received the Kenneth Hudson Award for Europe's most innovative museum in 2011.

H Croatian Museum of Naive Art

Ćirilometodska ul. 3, 10000, Zagreb, Croatia See map ›

Phone: +385 1 4851 911

Monday open hours: 10am - 5pm

See an exhibit of 80 paintings, prints, and sculptures by self-taught Croatian and international artists at Croatian Museum of Naive Art. Between the 1930s and the 1980s, these works were produced mainly by peasants and working men who had created their own styles and achieved fame. This art movement thrives on freedom and creativity, but differs from amateur art due to its highly poetic nature. The museum's collection totals 1,850 pieces, which it exhibits in rotation. View these expressions of individualism, with the common themes of social events and gatherings, rural life and work, and the creations of untamed imagination.

2:30pm
5:00pm

I Upper Town (Gornji Grad)

Dverce ul. 6, 10000, Zagreb, Croatia See map ›

Visit Upper Town (Gornji Grad) to explore some of the capital city's most interesting restaurants, bars, and unique sites, such as the Museum of Broken Relationships. Start in the central square and walk the network of narrow streets uphill to Kaptol. Move east to Gradec and Tkalciceva, the city's most colorful pedestrian street. Relax and people-watch in one of the many bohemian cafes. Head to the museum to learn about the town's history. See sculptures, drawings, and lithographs from one of the most famous Croatian artists at Mestrovic Studio. Notice the multi-colored tile roof, constructed in 1880, on the 13th-century St Mark's church. Before you take the funicular down to the lower town, be sure to stop at Lotrscak Tower.

K Mirogoj Cemetery

Aleja Hermanna Bollea 27, 10000, Zagreb, Croatia See map ›

Phone: +385 1 4696 707

Tuesday open hours: 6am - 8pm

Mirogoj Cemetery features elaborate arcades, pavilions, and tombs. The architect Hermann Bollé designed the main building in 1876, which was finished in 1929. Admire the entrance, which is overgrown with ivy and looks like a citadel welcoming visitors. Walk the cemetery's lanes and look for the final resting places of many famous Croatians, as well as Austro-Hungarians, and Yugoslavs. The cemetery is also home to many sculptures by famous Croatian artists, such as Ivan Mestrovic and Antun Augustincic.

L Ban Josip Jelačić Square

Trg bana Josipa Jelačića, 10000, Zagreb, Croatia See map ›

At Ban Josip Jelačić Square, the most common meeting place in the capital city, watch people coming and going among the newspaper and flower vendors. The square has been the center of the downtown pedestrian zone since the 17th century. Admire the classicist, secessionist, and modernist buildings. See the large equestrian statue of Count Josip Jelacic, who led Croatians into a battle for independence in the 19th century. The statue was removed from the square during the communist period, then returned to its original place in the 1990s. The square is inaccessible by car, but it is the main hub for trams.

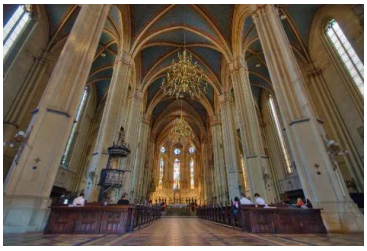
M Cathedral of Zagreb

Kaptol 31, Zagreb 10000 Croatia See map ›

Tuesday open hours: 10am - 5pm



Cathedral of Zagreb represents the most impressive Gothic church southeast of the Alps. The cathedral is the tallest building in Croatia and dominates Kaptol Square. The twin spires are a fixture of Zagreb's skyline. Inside the church, admire the Baroque marble altars, statues, the pulpit, large-scale stained-glass work, and other objects related to religious art. Don't miss the tomb of Cardinal Alojzije Stepinac, decorated with a relief by the famous Croatian sculptor Ivan Mestrovic. See a cycle of 13th century frescoes in the sacristy. Bring your camera for photos in the soft light of the interior.

Drive: 1 min ›

5:30pm

N Dolac Market

Zagreb Croatia See map ›

Situated right near the main cathedral, Dolac Market lets tourists experience a slice of local Croatian life. Fresh flowers, regional olive oil, dairy products, and fresh burek are just a few of the items sold here. While these markets are common in Croatian cities, Zagreb's is one of the largest and very popular with the locals. You, too, can do most of your food shopping here: the selection is good, the stall-keepers give lots of information about what they're offering, and in many cases, it's cheaper than the grocery store around the corner.

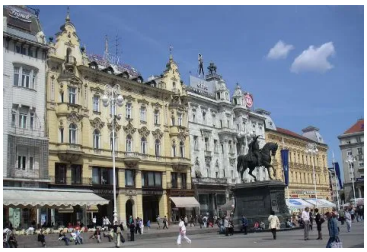
Lower Town

Lower Town, 10000, Zagreb, Croatia See map ›



Replete with imperial architecture and a modern layout, Lower Town serves as a showcase for Zagreb's modern development. Created in the 1870s, the city recalls the shape of a horseshoe, though this was not ever fully completed. Wander the city to explore its network of gardens, parks, and wide boulevards, as well as stores, shops, galleries, and museums, including an ethnographic display and a collection of famous European paintings. You'll find that the area's Hapsburg rulers infused the buildings with a taste of Austrian style. Finish of your tour of the square of Marshal Tito, where you can admire the nearby ornate palace.
